This aspect of lighting is endless in extent and its ramifications are numberless. No strict classification will be adhered to but in general those having a more scientific basis for existence will be treated first while those involving chiefly aesthetic taste will be discussed later. Artificial North Skylight.--This quality of light is the most generally acceptable for accurate color work, such as in matching and in inspecting colors. There is no need to discuss it further than to record the classes of work for which it is being used at present. It is not used for lighting large areas in the sense of general lighting although there are some rather extensive installations in existence. Artificial north skylight is at present used in the following places and occupations and perhaps in others: department stores, color printing, textile mills, dye houses, laboratories, cigar factories and stores, haberdasheries, chiropody, hair dressing, sugar testing, dentistry, painting, paint and wall paper stores, millinery shops, button factories, diamond and jewelry shops, medical examinations, surgical operations, microscopy, chemical analysis, flour mills, paper mills, garment factories, cotton mills. Artificial Noon Sunlight.--This quality of light is at present quite extensively used for general lighting in many cases where the requirements are not as refined as in the previous cases, and where eyes untrained in refined color-discrimination are involved. Among the places and occupations in which this quality of daylight is at present being used are the following; lithographing,...
