So unhappy, mother, he replied; and he fairly wept. Never mind, answered the venerable mother; we will make it up for you. Go home and quietly wait, and see what will happen. So he went; and after passing a night so different from those long peaceful nights of old, he awoke weary, and, rising sulkily, went into the forest. And lo! dancing before him was another of the creatures. But ah! she was fair and sweet and kind, --so had the other seemed a year ago; but who profits by experience?--so he embraced her, and they sought a distant covert where they might hide and eat honey together, and man knew the first happy day he had known for months. But as night approached, she told him with tears that they must part forever, for she must die; for that only had she...
