Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Recent Information Respecting Agricultural Education Elsewhere, Vol. 4 You refer to a problem which is somewhat difficult to solve; i. e., What is the proper work to be done on an experimental farm and garden? As you say, you cannot expect to compete with the shrewd and successful people about you, already engaged in farming and market gardening. It is difficult to determine, in an experimental garden, for example, how far it is profitable to illustrate the commoner operations in gardening by their actual performance. We hardly know yet when to begin or end our work, for there has been comparatively little done in systematizing either horticulture or agriculture. The fact of an experimental station being connected with an institution of learning, adds somewhat to the complications of the case; for many things must be done in such case which otherwise would be unnecessary: and yet, from an experience of eight years as student and teacher, I am inclined to believe that the greatest good can be done by making the Arboriculture, the Botanical and Experimental Gardens, rather adjuncts to the natural sciences, than the reverse. That is, I am pretty well assured that it will result in greater good, if the natural and physical sciences are made the centers, so to speak, from which to pass outward to the so-called practical sciences. I should teach Horticulture very largely as Economic Botany, treating it from the standpoint of the latter science; thus leaving most of that which relates to the details of planting, caring, and gathering of crops, to be learned by the student elsewhere. The market gardens to be found about any of our...
